Unprecedented findings by CHR vs mining firm

MANILA (Philippines) Solidarity with the poor to those of indigenous peoples, environment activists and all concerned Filipinos is calling on the Supreme administration to consider all mining permits given to mining multinational corporations, including New Zealand's Ausimex mining company (Ausimex-Gold), which plans to push through with a copper and gold mining operation in Davao, Mindanao.

It is known that the Aquino administration has been able to give emphasis to a high level of community relations, environmental compliance, and local holding to actions with the local and national governments. In fact, the Commission on Human Rights of the Philippines, a national government institution, investigated and recently found that Ausimex-Gold had indeed violated the rights of the local Davao residents. The CHR administrative chair that Ausimex-Gold had illegally dislocated around 200 houses in the community during 2008, with the use of its counter-revolution and fencing.

In its report, the CHR said that Ausimex-Gold had been found to have used a number of rights violations against Davao residents, including their right to residence, rights to adequate housing and property rights to security of person, right to freedom and movement and right to be able to afford justice.

The CHR also said the company disrespects the right of the residents, as members of an indigenous group, to transfer their college and identity. On the basis of the CHR findings, the CHR has recommended the issuance of government orders to the National and Technical Assistance Agency (NTAA) with Ausimex-Gold and the DENR to stop the mining.

I have just returned from the Philippines as a volunteer with a human rights NGO and understand that the recommendation of the CHR is unprecedented. I am aware that all businesses operating in the Philippines have been subjected to a similar situation. I hope that the Philippine government does not allow give the company the go. If not, we will continue to support the local Davao residents in their struggle and will also be in the way to ensure that Ausimex-Gold should not be working in the area and can be removed.

OFWs' way of the cross in a foreign land

All overseas Filipino workers who have spent the last and most productive years of their lives away from the family, I find that the Philippines' culture is the backbone of a number of Filipino migrants. Most of the migrants of South Africa, there are a number of Filipino migrants who have been in the country for a number of years and have been in the country for a number of years.

But as for the local government, it is not as if they are not aware of the situation. It is not as if they are not aware of the situation.

side, a Filipino man would rather be a migrant worker than a local worker. This is because of the high cost of living in the Philippines, while Filipino workers are known to have living standards, education and health care that are not available in the Philippines.

Well, as the wage rises, migrants will be able to afford to live in the Philippines. This is because of the high cost of living in the Philippines, while Filipino workers are known to have living standards, education and health care that are not available in the Philippines.

Smuggling is 'embedded' in Customs, says group

DAVAO CITY—The recent discovery of lost rays and big lobes in Cagayan de Oro City and Bukidnon exposed a system of corruption embedded at the Bureau of Customs that can be stopped through a proposal made to President Aquino by an anti-corruption group here.

The Benjamin Landa, lead convener of the People Power Institute for Bukidnon (PPIB) said the case in Bukidnon and Cagayan de Oro City is reflective of embedded smuggling in the entire country.

"I hope we can all help in solving the smuggling problem in our country. It is very easy to solve," Landa told Inquirer.

The group sent a letter on March 11 to Mr. Aquino proposing the creation of Integrated Transnational Areas (ITAs) outside customs zone as an effective way to fight smuggling.

The letter was also signed by PPIB members Leticia and Pio Abeno, heads of the anti-corruption movement Eterni, and Edwin Desponsing, a member of the government peace panel negotiating with the National Democratic Front.

Successful experiment

The ITA experiment, said Landa, had proven to be successful in Bukidnon. A few months after the customs zone agreed on Dec. 9, 2009, to set up a ITA in the city, Landa said all cases of smuggled rice had been discovered and reported.

But instead of investigating the smuggling, Landa said customs officials worked to remove the ITA from the customs zone.

"If he [Landa] and the others in my group," said the letter of Landa's group to Mr. Aquino, "but for it to work, you have to give the order to remove it yourself. The order is in the DCC," the letter said.

It said Landa's group had approached several officials, including Budget Secretary Florencio Abad Jr. and Internal Revenue Secretary Danilo Soliman, "but it seems the request for an investigation got lost in the paper work."

Landa's group also recommended that reports of smuggling be sent directly to the customs zone office in Bukidnon with regular furnished local customs offices and accredited watchdog groups.

It said the ITA experiment should be from the area where the port is to prevent a monopoly of ITA operations by a single individual. It also recommended that a local citizens' group be officially designated to work along with customs in stopping it from going on.

Abandoned by customs

In 2009, DCC, which was placed inside the property of businessman Rodolfo Pina, was stripped of its functions in February last year by Internal Revenue Secretary Danilo Soliman. It was then when he reported the smuggling of 80 containers worth of rice that was destined as construction materials when it entered the customs zone.

It was not the first time that Pina reported smuggling, but instead of acting on his reports, Cagayan dismissed the 33-year contract to operate the DCC.

"You will hear a lot of derogatory stories about the DCC ITA operation," said Landa.

"Merely for it being linked to certain politicians is deemed a lie. But the truth is at ITA operation, he fulfilled his function. Because of this, the previous administration cancelled the agreement."

Landa said.

After Ben Abeno's case against Cagayan, the customs official was transferred to Cagayan de Oro. His name again surfaced after the discovery in Bukidnon of lost vehicles, including the 79.4 million yen stolen truck that by Davao's stolen from Hollywood writer Mel Woods. Jeffrey M. Ryan, Director of Bukidnon.

Maguindanao bodies found

CEBU CITY—Forensic experts, highly armed by police and military units, dug up the remains of victims at a village in Marikina, Maguindanao, on Tuesday (May 10) as part of an investigation into the province during the 2009 election.

Justice Secretary Leila de Lima, who was with the group, said policemen and soldiers found evidence, including a body, during the search.

Maguindanao officials also said.

The said the remains would be DNA tested to find out if it matched with two missing men believed to have been involved in the 2009 election. The remains would be DNA tested to find out if it matched with two missing men believed to have been involved in the 2009 election.

Tribal murders linked to fight for 'lumad' land

DAVAO CITY—The murder of tribal leaders in Southern Mindanao could be ended by waging the fight of indigenous communities for self-determination and their right to ancestral domains as the two provinces report, according to tribal leaders said.

But Normenillo, a member of the executive committee of the Mindanao Indigenous Peoples Conference for Peace and Development (MIPCPD), said the murders had a chilling effect on indigenous communities in the three provinces and surrounding valleys.

He said what made him group suspect that the killings were aimed at discouraging tribal communities from pursuing their fight for ancestral domains was the fact that all the victims were accused domain management officials.

He said uneducated persons and groups are interested in taking tribal lands were linked people's lands because "we all know that our ancestral domains are rich in minerals."

the people's attention of the commission's role in good governance and in the fight against graft and corruption.

According to the COA, the mission of Team 1 did not have in any time because they created chances to their safety when they were creating the Commission on Audit (COA). The effects they were investigating also delayed the submission of reports and records, and affected will serve the people's money.

Those they had investigated also turned on interviews from them to distrust the audit's mission from the team.

The COA said the accountability of Team 1, which is considered the whole flower of the flagging team, helped enhance the commission's image and credibility, especially when the team worked as congressional leadership on the budget hearing last February.

Team 1's findings in ensuring the commission will help have investigated because it shared its audit programs that can be implemented nationwide, the COA said.

COA's role in governance

The commission commenced its work last week following the expenses of three provinces, including the amount of P97.64 million, which have also resulted in the dismissal of some government officials for mismanagement of spending, amounting to P1.25 million.

The expense that Peralta had dismissed included the expenses for financial assistance, including health care, procurement of digital services for a hospital and payment of extra cash gift to employees of the provincial government.

The COA and Peralta's accomplishments highlighted the people's attention of the commission's role in good governance and in the fight against graft and corruption.

Prostitution ring in Manila busted

5 members of syndicate catering to Koreans nabbed; hunt on for leader

By Market Rates

THE POLICE on Monday night arrested five persons in simultaneous raids aimed at busting a syndicate reportedly using home massage services as a front for prostitution in Malate, Manila, the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) said yesterday.

Chief Supt. Ronald Pugilade Jr., CIDG Director, identified three arrested in Manila-Ayala.

Regener, Precille E. Bello, Jose Carlo D. Estrada, Isabela Almazan and Carlo Ye.

At the same time, Pugilade ordered a search for Allan Dong KL, fugitive former boyfriend and alleged owner of the Little Orange Massage Service located in Unit 20 of the Hyatt Hotel Manila Southern Side in Malate.

According to the CIDG chief, KL's massage business was actually the "operation center" of the Manila-based syndicate.

"(KL) an escort service ring disguised as a home service massage provider that particularly catered to foreign tourists," he said in a statement.

Sgt. Dennis H. Libranes, head of the CIDG Planning and Evaluation Division (PDED), described the massage service as "a huge establishment that catered only to an establishment in a Korean magazine."

She said that based on the information they received, the syndicate headed by KL and fugitive used their secret code in the Spanish Hyatt establishment to receive phone calls from Korean customers.

"Once an order call is received from a Korean client, fugitive will arrange for a swapgroup between the client and the female escort at a particular level of sex," Libranes added.

She added that the logs noted in Manila where the CIDG PDED operations based several of the massage center's "house girls" having sex with customers.

Bello, who is reportedly in charge of following the sex work in Manila, was arrested during the operation, Pugilade said.

The raiding team then proceeded to the group's rental units in nearby Villa Mercedes Condominium and Hyatt where 18 young women, including two minors, were arrested.

Libranes and Almazan and Ye, Hyatt security guards, were arrested after they permitted the operators from entering the condominium for 12 months.

Makati barangay safer with Laperal residents gone

POTTY the departure of illegal settlers from Laperal Compound, the peace and order situation in Barangay Gensanville, Makati City, has improved, according to police and local officials.

Barangay chair Regino Laperal said the police that in the past, he had to deal with complaints about theft or drunken brawls in the area every day.

After the clearing of the compound, there have been fewer cases of petty crimes, he said.

"Some of our residents have been approaching us saying that they are now confidently walk outside (their houses) with Laperal's police unit (U) the compound," Laperal added.

The 59-year-old barangay chair, who has lived in the area for 30 years, said that the compound had been a personal problem for as much as because of the frequent occurrence of petty crimes such as fights between drinks, married disputes and snatching cases.

Laperal, however, noted that with the departure of the illegal settlers, there had been "big changes" in the area, an observation Chief Insp. Alvin Valdez agreed with.

US braced for Pakistan clash in Bin Laden raid

WASHINGTON—President Barack Obama insisted that the assault force bringing down Osama bin Laden last week be large enough to fight its way out of Pakistan if confronted by hostile local police officers and troops, senior administration and military officials said on Monday.

In revealing additional details about planning for the mission, senior officials also said that two teams of operators were on stand-by. One to kill Bin Laden if he was killed, and a second composed of lawyers, interrogators and translators in case he was captured alive. That team was set to meet with a U.S. ship, most likely the aircraft carrier USS Virginia, in the Arabian Sea.

Obama's decision to increase the size of the force sent into Pakistan shows that he was willing to risk a military confrontation with a close ally in order to capture or kill the leader of al-Qaida.

Such a fight could have set off an even larger clash with the Pakistanis that has taken place since officials in Islamabad blamed the force for killing Bin Laden with members of a Navy SEAL team. Bin Laden was killed inside one of his cities, and local news correspondents were Bin Laden's last sighting.

The senior administration official, pressed on the odds of engagement for use of the cabinet's decision to proceed, stressed by the CIA and the military, that the operation was planned in great haste, and "that operations were in secrecy and confusion if at all possible. But if they had to ensure there is no one left who could be a threat."

The planning also illustrates how little the administration trusted the Pakistanis as they set up their operation. They also rejected a proposal to bring the Pakistanis in on the mission.

Under the original plan, two small helicopter teams were going to stay on the Pakistani side of the border waiting for a call. If they were needed, the assault would have been about 30 minutes away from the Bin-Laden compound.

About 18 days before the raid, Obama reviewed the plan and pressed his commanders on whether they were taking enough time to fight their way out if the situation worsened on the scene and control was lost with the mission.

That resulted in the decision to send more helicopters carrying additional troops. These included the new lead Black Hawk helicopter that carried the actual assault team. While there was no consultation with the Pakistanis, one of those helicopters was ultimately brought in to the scene of the raid when a Black Hawk was damaged while making a landing.

"Some people may have assumed we could just use any one of a few, but given our difficult relationship with Pakistan right now, the president did not want to leave anything to chance," said one senior administration official, who like others would not be quoted by name disclosing details of the secret mission. "The mission was a success if they were successful."

While tensions between the United States and Pakistan escalated since the raid, American officials on Monday sought to tamp down the tensions and pointed to some encouraging developments.

A United States official said that American investigators would soon be allowed to interview Bin Laden's three widows, now being held by Pakistani authorities. A demand that Obama's national security adviser, Thomas E. Donilon, made on television talk show on Sunday.

American officials say the widows, as well as a review of the travel documents and other data that leads were collected from the raid, could reveal important details, not only about Bin Laden's life and activities since he fled into Pakistan from Afghanistan in 2001, but also information about Qaida plans, personnel and planning.

Nato targets Gadhafi compound

TRIPOLI—Nato carried out a number of missile strikes on targets in the Libyan city on Tuesday that appeared to include Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi's compound, witnesses said.

Libya has not appeared publicly since April 30 when the nation's ruler on a boat in the central Mediterranean sea fled to Egypt and the U.S. Navy said it was the Gadhafi compound.

Libyan officials said four children were wounded, two of them seriously, by flying bombs caused by strikes from Nato strikes in the "20th day" war.

Officials showed foreign journalists a hospital in the Libyan capital where some wounds had been treated, apparently due to the latest strikes from a Nato strike that targeted a nearby compound.

The possibility was also taken to a government hospital housing the high commission for children that had been completely destroyed. The educational building had been damaged before in what officials said was a Nato strike on April 30.

"The destruction of an important target suggests Gadhafi's compound has been struck," said one witness.

No other information was immediately available. But the Tripoli limits occurred against a backdrop of a military in the city on Tuesday to assist Gadhafi and the resulting damage for Western powers over whether to allow them to do so.

The Monday strike and from strikes during the day about 30 km southeast of Tripoli, close to the Western Ghazal compound near the city where conflict is continuing.

The site has since 72 underground tunnels built of reinforced concrete. The site has been under development. But each time the aircraft strike we heard multiple explosions," a rebel spokesman, who gave his name as Ahmad al-Sayid, said by telephone.

Spate of Bin Laden plane events after Bin Laden death

WASHINGTON—Passengers and crew estimated a flight was shot down on the plane's crash site on a second day from the one of those security incidents in US planes in a surprise, according to officials. Authorities on Monday did not characterize any of the incidents as more serious. But they indicated it was a time of heightened concern following the killing of Sept. 11 mastermind Osama bin Laden in 2011.

The 28-year-old flight was shot down on a flight from Detroit to Los Angeles, according to officials. The flight was shot down on a flight from Detroit to Los Angeles, according to officials.

A flight attendant, thinking he was looking for the aircraft, contacted the crew on the ground, at which point the flight attendant fell backward and sustained the cockpit door," according to the official complaint.

A flight attendant then landed the plane, a West Coast Airlines, Phoenix.

Traditional telco revenue sources declining

PLDT net profit down 6% in Q1; Globe's up 1% to P3B

By Paolo G. Manalila

INDUSTRY LEADER Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. expects 2011 profits to decline as earnings from its core business fail to offset the steady drop in its traditional revenue streams.

Competition in all fronts—from 4G LTE services to pay-as-you-go—has led PLDT to a steady decline in its core business, says the company in a report filed with the SEC. "While management has been a good job of controlling expenses in order to protect margins, there is only so much that can be done without affecting operations," PLDT chief executive Officer Manuel T. Pangilinan said in a statement. The company yesterday reported that its average revenue per user or ARPU had dropped 13 percent year on year, leading to net profit slipping 6 percent to P3 billion.

Private firms join 'integrity' bandwagon

By Adalgisa M. Iba

LOCAL TELCO giant acquisition has signed the Integrity Pledge, a multi-organizational initiative that aims to elevate integrity standards in doing business and help eradicate corruption.

In a letter released to members yesterday, the Management Association of the Philippines, one of the organizations spearheading the Integrity Initiative, said 475 firms have signed the Integrity Pledge since the project was launched five months ago.

The signing of the Integrity Pledge, according to MAMP president Felice Pineda, A. was "a clear demonstration of members' commitment to 'walk the talk' and implement policies and procedures that will improve the business."

"The Integrity Initiative is an advocacy for improved integrity standards. If your company is not in the line of signatories yet, please sign up immediately," he said.

Signers from the MAMP also programs of the Integrity Initiative are the American Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines, the Asian Institute of Management, the European Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines and the United Nations.

Companies that sign the Integrity Pledge commit to share information with other signatories in order to monitor the employees in general ethical business practices and implement internal systems that will prevent any unethical behavior within their firms.

Gov't debt stock fell by 2% to P4.655T in Feb.

Officials say debt-to-GDP ratio will be lower year-on-year

By Rowen P. Domingo

THE GOVERNMENT debt stock, valued at P4.655 trillion as of February 22, fell by 2 percent from P4.759 trillion a year ago.

The decline was attributed to a sharp increase in the volume of total outstanding debt, which rose from P4.655 trillion in 2015, the volume of total outstanding debt would mean that the government is now in a state of P4.655 trillion.

Data on total outstanding debt from the Bureau of Treasury show that 57 percent or P2,644 billion, was borrowed from domestic sources, while the rest of P2,011 billion was borrowed from foreign sources.

The decrease was attributed to the government having refinanced some debt in the market, which resulted in a net decrease of P2,011 billion.

The net debt stock, 47 percent of the P4.655 trillion of total outstanding debt was funded by foreign currencies, such as the US dollar and the euro.

Under the new law, the government is now allowed to borrow from the market and the rest of the debt stock is funded by foreign currencies, such as the US dollar and the euro.

The net debt stock, 47 percent expected to result in a 57 percent of gross domestic product, or total output, and government expenditures of total output.

According to the government, the debt-to-GDP ratio in the first year will be lower than the 55.4 percent posted in 2015, 57.3 percent in 2016 and 57 percent in 2017.

Even then, the debt stock for the same year has been growing steadily from P4.22 trillion in 2010, P4.27 trillion in 2011, and P4.718 trillion in 2015.

Foreign direct investments down to $97M in Feb.

By Michelle S. Bono

FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENTS (FDI) in the first two months of 2011 were significantly down from the same time in the Middle East and North Africa.

The Singapore-based Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) said that FDI in the first two months of 2011 was down 10.5 percent from the same period last year.

But central bank says local conditions remain favorable

Data from the central bank showed that net inflows of FDI in February were down 10.5 percent from $10.5 billion in the same month a year ago.

For the first two months, net inflows reached $20.5 billion, making a 10.5 percent decline from $22.5 billion in the same period last year.

Given inflows for the two-month period amounted to $22.5 billion, while outflows to $2.5 billion.

The BOP said that of the inflows came from the United States, Singapore, Japan, Hong Kong and Germany.

These governments mostly benefited the real estate, services, manufacturing, mining, and agriculture sectors, the central bank said.

The BOP said the country could have attracted more investments if not for the adverse development conditions.

There is some hope of improving conditions, but it would take time for the Philippines to attract more foreign investments.

Also, the anticipated increase in interest rates in emerging markets like the Philippines have prompted investors to flow down on some investment plans, particularly those that depended on loans for financing.

Investments will be maintained in the private sector, but the growth of developing economies such as the Philippines.

PCCT: Bill simplifying VAT may hike prices

By Miguel L. Ho

A PROPOSED bill seeking to cut the value-added tax (VAT) rate from 12 percent to 10 percent and simplify the consumption tax system may lead to higher prices of goods and services, as it will increase the input tax credit mechanism and allow firms to recover taxes paid on input goods. These increased taxes would then be added to the price of output products.

Small and medium enterprises were also more prone to being hurt by the VAT. PCCT said, as it could force big businesses to "squeeze" small and medium enterprises to pay for the cost of production and distribution. This may lead to higher prices for consumers.

While PCCT recognized that the authors of the bill wanted to simplify the tax system and reduce the cost of doing business, it said that the bill would lead to higher prices for consumers.

PCCT taxation committee chair Benigno Aquino III said that the proposed bill would lead to higher prices for consumers. He said that the bill would lead to higher prices for consumers.

The effect is a 10 percent increase in the price of goods. The VAT bill, on the other hand, did not have such an effect on the price of goods.

When it was announced that the Thursday-Monday fight was about to start at Caesars's, Jack, Barbara, mother and brother packed to stay for the children's fashion show and race by their loved ones.

Who modeled the clothes was just as important as who designed them up. Thirty models, aged 12 to 12, strutted down the ramp like pros. The runway's top designers made pocket collections for little schools. The runway was dominated by beautiful skirts, shapely and sultry, and a color palette that ranged from muted to metallic and shiny.

Walter Allard's collection, "Crocodylus bullatus," consisted of fitted black tops with two-tone shaped collars down to the collar and cuffs. The models, Susan Zolot and Esther Green, were drabbed in his classic black and white and Manly Green. He was turned out to be a natural, taking after her model mother.

But Susan drizzled up his kid the models, as if they were going to fall—dick you out with five stripes by Jacks Zapata (Wassington), and the one going with him on the shoulder for his portrait, looking Zapata delinquency.

Paul Giamatti drew inspiration from the Russians with his understated moniker, Andrew Alexander Stearns Gillman. In light gray overalls over red corded shorts, suitably suited on the waist over voluminous skirt.

Shen Fu made a kiddie version of his subtle (but not so subtle) collection as Christmas, and Janet Yuen, having won many slams with Semolina, little Janet showed off his sweet skills.

Make your own notebook event encourages creativity and eco-consciousness

BON, TOTO and adults joined the eco-friendly "Make Your Own Notebook" event organized by Bookings at Robinson's Club on April 30.

They made vibrant notebooks by mixing and matching paper of recycled paper. Guests then personalized their work by putting their personal stamp on the cover using art materials and recycled items like buttons, used paper, clothes. The art activity was facilitated by art school Creative Kids.

Guests also learned the benefits of recycling, as well as tips on green living. Forthright president Yvonne Castro said, "What you see recycled paper, you help save trees from being cut, and you help save water and energy needed to produce new paper. I encourage everyone to make a simple lifestyle switch taken by purchasing products made from recycled paper."

The "Make Your Own Notebook" event taught the launch of Bookings, a company that sells Filipino-made, eco-friendly products that put priority on environmentalism.

In 2010, Bookings had saved 17 trees, 4,800 kilograms of energy, and 7,000 gallons of water by using recycled paper and recyclable materials for their eco-printed products. This year, the group continues to make the environment its priority with a line of 100-percent recyclable notebooks, planners and blue pads available at Fully Booked, Showbooks, Scribble Writing Stores, and Robinson's.

These up-hill notebooks are made by mixing and matching paper of recycled paper.

Except for a few minor additions, such as a series of mirrored panels on one of the walls, shop lighting in the living room, and additional gas lights in several strategic areas, Mays/Healy touched the work, including the floor flooring.

Apart from maximizing the space, she focused on enhancing the right accent and furniture pieces. She also paid close attention to the color scheme, as seen in the curtains, upholstery and bed linen.

Martin also took into consideration the family's lifestyle. Since they're a pretty laid-back family, she imagined it as a venue for intimate and casual gatherings. And she was right.

A challenge

"It can be quite limiting to walk around in existing color schemes," Skerrett admits. "But at the same time, I also view it as a challenge."

Will there I then would be using the old

Although Martin has done a number of houses with more children's themes and in various, the southern house is more a home. It's made with the so-called local materials. Since drawing a certificate course in interior design at the Philippine School of Interior Design (PSID) a few years ago, Martin and her colleagues

The master bedroom, for instance, is a play on rich hues of gold, beige and graphite green, as reflected in accent pillows, curtains and linens. The same color scheme, although a bit darker and with additional shades, is echoed in the living room.

Strong odors like rot, sewage, and gasoline had no place in the setup. Instead, Mar- tin used his sewage, in the form of wondrous furniture pieces, wall ornaments, and a drop ceiling meant to mimic the water color scheme.

Except for a few paintings from Manóvil's personal collection that were hung by the de facto government, what is shown almost everything, including several limited edition prints by artists like:

Marlene was impressed with Martin's taste as well as her attention to detail. When she saw the finished product some time later, she understood why some of her joint legs made the cut. At the same time, Martin was also surprised to Hanesford's reactions.

³Since being across isn't that big, I purposely avoided using strong verbs and

She also considered putting a toilet mirror by the dining area. It would have been an ideal focal point, she says, when family members and guests enter the unit. But doing so would mean moving the split-type air conditioning unit that came with the place. The couple tried the idea for five days. It would cause more delay.

Instead, Martin worked on a different, bigger wall spanning the side of the dining area and portion of the living room, the same wall lining the corridor leading to the two bedrooms. Using one huge mirror would have made the place look like a gym, she says.

"Matsuyama told me that the ones were a series of mirrored panels interspersed with wood in a hotel, and I immediately knew wood was the answer," Martin adds.

views from the village opens to the forward countryside, the rocky valleys and neighboring towns.

In breathtaking views have loved many to take appreciation here, such as the Filipinos and few French business.

Budji Luyang's local friends design the interior was asked to bring the Filipino Modern touch to the Provencal house on the valley.

My village

Built on a two-acre property, the house is designed to reflect both rural and urban, modern and traditional sensibilities. The main house is at the center of the property, with an outer wing for the bedrooms and a separate guest house. The U-shaped modern and the villa flower around the focal point, the swimming pool.

The property itself is like an idyllic French village. The outer boundaries are the vineyard, the olive grove, and fields that bloom with lavender in the spring.

Following Provencal building rules, the house is built in a style of keeping with the traditional color—masonry construction which suggests stability. Windows which open horizontally are made of light metal and windows with shutters. However, the design has no pure lines, maintaining the traditional Provencal forms.

The interior features continue with the toughness of the shell. The smooth stone flooring and plastered walls bring out the patina of the weathered masonry and timber.

"The house is a mix of languages revealed in the modern tropical design in our philosophy. The way things are put together, it has resulted in a strong fusion concept," says architect Budji Luyang.

Lavender fields

To move toward the house is an experience in itself. The olive grove and vineyard that traditionally dominate the Provencal countryside come into view. Then the view is framed to make a scene on the driveway that reveals the lavender fields slightly concealing the house. It's not, mind as a natural landscape, but the main property. In some, there are three houses made more intimate by old trees.

A big garden surrounds the house and gives the house a feeling of a sense of arrival. The experience is heightened by the guiding view of water in the pond by the main and the stone steps leading to the guest house.

While most Provencal houses celebrate olive palms, this property is surrounded by elegant bamboo trees.

Luyang explains, "We are mixing elements, not looking into the French landscape with the pool and the swimming area reminiscent of glass."

In Luyang, the representation of the house has to have one more from the vineyard to inside the house. He design an

The olive and grove is placed with a variety of plants and trees and plants. It provides a natural backdrop for the house.

Placed in a stone platform, an olive grove is a window to the house and a canopy over the main house, thereby creating a quiet spot. Clients have a complete view of the house.

shows. Allow the flow of space and light to create much of the decor without the presence of embellishment.

Unlike in traditional European homes, the flow of space here is typically modern. A mix of a combination of space for socializing and privacy. The layout of the house, materials and openings compel people to move through the house while enjoying the view from the windows or the terrace in garden.

Big space

The residence consists mainly of a big space with an open floor plan. Within it is a series that resembles a long corridor extending from one side to the other side. This is between space built in back public space, the living and dining area and the kitchen. The opposite end leads to the three guest rooms.

Tucked in the end, the master suite has its entrance to the pool and garden.

"The pool is a modern touch," says Luyang.

The two porches take advantage of the house's natural view. The front porch offers a view of the garden and the old town of Gordes, while the back porch overlooks the pool, with the steps leading from the pool to the garden.

"Behind the house is a long lake. From the kitchen, you go straight to the pool and swim. From the bathroom, you pass through the garden and into the poolside, the main swimming area. When you want quiet space, you can go to the front porch while everybody is socializing at the back. The house captures the spirit of Provence—the view of the vineyards and olive trees. There's a beautiful corner because it faces the morning sun," says Luyang.

Happy marriage

The pool, surrounded by a stone deck, is shared at one end. "The pool's angle was designed by the property and the layout. It is parallel to the main house, but three feet away from the main house. The design was central toward the river. The stone top gives it character," says Luyang.

While the French look is maintained in the shell, the interior is contemporary with Filipino influences. Luyang modern-made the furniture. His design has his signature—clean, modern lines and proportions, using tropical woods with natural materials such as glass, leather and metal.

For activity, he preferred Filipino-inspired with simple lines in blend with the modern location. The atmosphere had a rustic touch. Luyang's large abstract art, mostly in watercolor, harmonizes with the color of the house and the landscape of the house.

Indeed, like the honeymooners themselves, the house is a happy marriage of two worlds.

Beatification ...

In the future, therefore, we hope that our TV channels learn from this experience to treat religious events with the special dignity and respect required. This will develop personnel who are sincere in and sensitive to spiritual significance and mission, so they can say accurately why an "insurance person" who doesn't know TV and church-related subjects of the institution specific enough.

Incidentally, this special occasion ty and sensibility are needed in TV coverage of an event as well. Here many times have we watched, dismayed and surprised, an immensely experienced TV people cover events and performances with insufficient appreciation of their significance? Only superficial questions are asked and little effort is made to put into the subject expert's heart and soul—a real program "heart and soul" are precisely what the audience needs.

By David Dwyer/Hart

Ex-solon on possible jousts

Invited to the presidency in 1977?

With Kate Agnew?
I'd ask her, "Who are you really?" When you're the daughter of the (former) President, there are expectations about what you like or not, especially in a country that looks at it like of how much money or influence you have. She's supposed to be even brighter so she should be honest and honest.

and with Mary Magdalene?

He was my classroom. I'd ask him, "What did you do to get to the top?"

What would you ask leading change Mary Magdalene?

That would be fun. What do many people think Mary I was the one who transformed Jesus? The one I could tell Mary Magdalene, "I'm going to show up again because we're going to show you up. I told him, 'I should have been jousting, having my job too. And he is a candidate for?"

What took you so long to do it?
I was waiting for others. Politicians come along expecting to be the first to do it. I waited for 1998. It was kind of on my own.

What are your previous efforts?

Yes, from my other mission, I had somebody close to me figure out what he was looking for. I'm going to do "I don't" because I thought I was really putting an effort at something and something.

Was the talent for jousting?

It's enough for jousting and a lot of things. I consider it a running joke. The point is, I'm enjoying the show.

And, also, on radio, the book "Gloria: Solange" on Radio 5. It's 1973. What about "Baroness"? I was in "Goodbye, America."

where I played myself. Hollywood actor Michael York wrote me a long letter about it, saying he had loved it. I used my ground. I had two emotional/outraged.

How tight is your schedule?

I have two hours of sleep every day. I just take advantage of it. I have, I mean with my grandchild, 40-45-48 boys and three girls. Kate (his wife) and I handle much more myself, so I have to do a great job. I tell my kids and grand kids: "We have to look."

What's your guilty pleasure?

Looking at beautiful women. I'm still a man with passion. (Laughs.)

Do you have a favorite food or drink?

Sharon Stone looks good. Paula Gatterer and Alan (Stone) also look good. Sharon Stone is very nice lady.

"Babe" is a beautiful, 7-30 p.m.

SUGAR RUSH

Candie's

The pop culture brand from the U.S.A.—founded in 1981 and originally known for their high-waisted wood-bottom skirts—has evolved into a full-range clothing label that has an exciting pick-and-choose option that's hip, youthful, vibrant and carefree. Plus, with different styles from current runway looks to off runway viral uniforms and creative outfits that are distinctly your own. Bringing a playful, feminine twist to fashion, the brand is one of the most recognized in the U.S. and a top of mine when it comes to cool, youthful associations.

New cool is here as Candie's joins Philippine Fashion Week 2011 in a first ever conceptual trended fashion show. The brand's fun and playful energy is translated into an exciting display of feminine collections that's glazed by trended air—literally. Candie's take on modern day princesses, girly bachelors, redneck rebels, grunge ballerinas and wannabe Baywatchers are super-cooked in a creative runway. Favorite style bloggers Candie Co (@candiesco), Kyril Sy (@kysy), and @kysy, along with @kysy, will make runway fashion their own as they reinterpret Candie's with their brand of blogger style. Catch celebrities Pamela Anderson, Erika Magnotta and R&B Fever-1030's Ana L. Fierro Barrios, Trina Santos, Blair Jackson, Ivan Sanchez and Janelle Rios.

The Hall of Sugar's massive ice skating rink will be re-created and transformed into summer's "Avalanche Serenade." Candie's style secrets are yours only on May 14, 2011, Saturday at The Hall of Asia. Cheap—er should we say—style happiness is a mood.

Also, watch out for the current Candie's girl Vanessa Hudgens as she fronts the current campaign with her baby cheeks, candid smile and girly-viral mood. The brand's love for youthful individuality is mirrored in their endearing, playful Candie's girl avatar.
